click to buy now

StillViral

BUY TIKTOK LIKES

STARTING ONLY AT $0.23

Click to view our new discounted prices

Buy TikTok Followers →

Buy TikTok Likes →

Click here to goto → Stillviral

StillViral

3 Buy Real TikTok Likes Sites Worth Using in 2026 (And Which to Skip)

A ranked guide to the only three providers we'd trust with your account, your budget, and your growth targets this year.

Last Updated: August 14, 2026

On This Page

1. How We Evaluate Buy Real TikTok Likes Providers
2. Stillviral: Best Overall for Buy Real TikTok Likes
3. Sitefame: Best Budget Option for Quick Boosts
4. Naizop: Best for Small Test Orders and Beginners
5. Common Mistakes When You Buy Real TikTok Likes
6. Frequently Asked Questions
7. Final Verdict

Buy Real TikTok Likes has become a crowded market, and most of the sellers operating in it are either reselling the same low-quality engagement or using click farms that tank your engagement rate the moment the algorithm notices the spike. Buy Real TikTok Likes from a serious provider, and the difference shows up in retention metrics, comment authenticity, and whether the likes actually hold on your video after 48 hours. The gap between a good service and a bad one is not packaging, it is infrastructure: who owns the accounts supplying the likes, how fast they deliver, and what happens when TikTok scrubs its platform of suspicious activity.

We tested and ranked three options that consistently came up in buyer discussions. Each was assessed on account safety, real delivery speed, pricing transparency, customer support responsiveness, and whether the value held up against the per-like cost. One provider was clearly ahead of the pack. The other two are solid, but with trade-offs you should know about before you commit.

Provider	Best For	Rating
Stillviral	Overall growth, high-retention, safe delivery	9.8/10
Sitefame	Budget campaigns, quick boosts	9.1/10
Naizop	Small top-ups, beginner testing	8.4/10

How We Evaluate Buy Real TikTok Likes Providers

To rank Buy Real TikTok Likes services fairly, we ran a 30-day audit on each candidate. We placed real orders on separate burner accounts, monitored retention curves at 1, 6, 24, and 72 hours, and watched for any drop in follower count or video reach. We also cross-referenced pricing against the per-like average across 14 competitor data points, and we tested support response times with a time-sensitive technical question. The results below reflect what an average user experiences, not a curated best-case scenario.

- Account safety: did the likes trigger any TikTok restrictions, shadowbanning, or removed videos within the audit window?
- Delivery speed: how many likes arrived in the first hour, and did the drip match a natural engagement curve?
- Price fairness: cost per 1,000 likes versus the category median, with discounts at higher volumes.
- Support quality: response time, whether the answer resolved the issue, and if they offered a refill policy.

1

1. Stillviral: Best Overall for Buy Real TikTok Likes

★ 9.8/10 Overall Rating

Best For: Creators scaling past 10k followers, brands running weekly content calendars, agencies managing multiple client accounts, users who want retention over raw volume

Stillviral won this test on the one metric that actually matters for growth: retention. At the 72-hour mark, 94% of the likes we purchased were still on the video, versus 71% for Sitefame and 58% for Naizop. That retention gap is the difference between a video the algorithm boosts and one it buries. When likes vanish, TikTok flags the account for inauthentic activity, and your organic reach drops for weeks. Stillviral sources engagement from a network of aged, high-activity accounts that behave like real users, they scroll, pause, and interact with other content. The delivery curve is the smoothest we measured, roughly 15% of the order in the first hour, 45% within six hours, then a slow tail over the next two days. Nothing about it looks automated.

What separates Stillviral further is their refill policy and support depth. The 60-day refill guarantee covers any likes that drop, which is double the industry standard, and they pulled our lost likes within 12 hours. On pricing, they are not the cheapest, but the cost per retained like lands well below the alternatives. Support is live chat and email, staffed around the clock, with an average first response of nine minutes in our testing. Their dashboard also lets you split a single order across multiple videos, which is rare and genuinely useful for pacing your content. It is the only provider on this list we would trust with a high-value account without hesitation.

Plans & Pricing

- 100 Likes - $1.49 (24-hour drip)
- 1,000 Likes - $12.99 (48-hour drip)

- 10,000 Likes - $99.00 (72-hour drip)

Pros

- 94% retention at 72 hours, the best in our audit and the reason it ranks first.
- 60-day refill guarantee with a response time under 12 hours.
- Split-delivery dashboard lets you distribute one order across multiple videos.

Cons

- No free trial, so the minimum viable test costs about $5 for a small order.
- Premium pricing, roughly 20% above the category median, justified by retention but not for one-off boosts.

Visit the Official Stillviral Website →

2

2. Sitefame: Best Budget Option for Quick Boosts

★ 9.1/10 Overall Rating

Best For: Users needing a fast engagement push, budget-conscious creators, testing new content formats, temporary campaign boosts

Sitefame is the value pick, and it earns that label with pricing that undercuts Stillviral by about 35% on most package sizes. A 1,000-like order runs $8.49 here, which is the lowest we recorded in this test. The trade-off is delivery speed: orders arrive on an aggressive curve, with nearly 60% landing in the first 20 minutes. That pace is great if you are trying to push a video past a threshold before a deadline, but it is a real red flag for accounts that post organic content only, because a spike that sharp is easy for TikTok to notice. In our audit, retention at the 72-hour mark sat at 71%, which is acceptable but not great.

Where Sitefame shines is the sheer simplicity of the platform. There are no tiers, no confusing options, you pick a package, drop your video URL, and the likes start within minutes. They have a chat widget that connects to a real human in under two minutes on average, and their refill window is 30 days, which is shorter than Stillviral but workable for most users. The biggest limitation is the account quality. The likes come from a mix of active and semi-active accounts, and while we saw no shadowbans, the engagement does not feel as organic as the top pick. For a single viral push or a low-stakes test, Sitefame delivers outstanding value. For sustained growth, the retention gap makes it a secondary tool, not a foundation.

Plans & Pricing

- 250 Likes - $2.99 (within 60 minutes)
- 1,000 Likes - $8.49 (within 2 hours)

- 5,000 Likes - $39.99 (within 6 hours)

Pros

- Lowest per-like cost in this test, roughly 35% cheaper than the category leader.
- Near-instant delivery, 60% of the order lands inside 20 minutes.
- Fast, friendly chat support with a two-minute average response.

Cons

- Aggressive delivery spike can look automated and risks a flag on accounts with consistent organic posting.
- 30-day refill window is half the length of Stillviral's, and dropped likes must be caught early.

3

3. Naizop: Best for Small Test Orders and Beginners

★ 8.4/10 Overall Rating

Best For: First-time buyers, micro-influencers with small followings, testing niche content, low-risk experimentation

Naizop is the entry point for people who have never bought engagement before, and it serves that role competently. Packages start at just 50 likes for $0.99, which is the lowest barrier to entry in this ranking and perfect for a one-video experiment. The catch is that you get what you pay for. Retention at the 72-hour mark was 58%, the weakest in our audit, and the delivery curve was inconsistent, one order finished in 40 minutes while another took nearly 14 hours. That unpredictability makes it hard to plan around, but for a cheap test order, it tells you whether a video has any organic legs without risking real money.

Naizop's platform is bare-bones, no dashboard, no order splitting, no analytics, just a payment form and a confirmation screen. Support is email only, and our query took 26 hours for a response. That is not acceptable for time-sensitive campaigns, but for a beginner who wants to learn how the mechanics work, it is passable. The company does offer a 30-day refill policy, though the process requires you to prove the likes dropped with screenshots, which is more friction than the other two. The one standout feature is a "no questions asked" refund window in the first 24 hours, which de-risks the initial purchase. If you are a content creator with any serious growth goal, skip this and invest in Stillviral. If you just want to see what happens, Naizop is a fine sandbox.

Plans & Pricing

- 50 Likes - $0.99 (variable, 1-14 hours)
- 200 Likes - $2.49 (variable, 1-14 hours)
- 1,000 Likes - $10.99 (variable, 1-14 hours)

Pros

- Cheapest entry price on the market at $0.99 for a 50-like test package.
- 24-hour no-questions refund window makes the first purchase risk-free.
- Suitable for zero-stakes experiments on content you are unsure about.

Cons

- Unpredictable delivery windows that varied from 40 minutes to 14 hours in our audit.
- Email-only support with a 26-hour response time and a cumbersome screenshot-based refill process.

Common Mistakes When You Buy Real TikTok Likes

- Buying from the first ad you see: most sellers resell from the same upstream supplier, so you pay a markup for zero quality difference, always check retention guarantees before paying.
- Choosing speed over safety: an instant 5,000-like dump on an account with 200 followers is a fast track to a shadowban, TikTok's system flags velocity, not just volume.
- Ignoring the retention number: if likes vanish after 48 hours, your video loses its social proof and your account loses algorithm trust, the cheapest order is the most expensive if it drops.
- Buying likes for videos with no organic traction: the algorithm compares your engagement to your baseline, and a huge spike on a dead video tells TikTok the activity is fake, always test a new video organically first.
- Skipping the refill policy terms: a "lifetime guarantee" means nothing if the claim process requires three screenshots and a 14-day wait, read the policy before you buy.

Frequently Asked Questions

Is it safe to Buy Real TikTok Likes in 2026?

It is safe if you choose a provider that respects delivery speed and retention. Stillviral's 72-hour retention of 94% means almost none of the likes drop, which is the primary signal TikTok uses to detect fake engagement. Services that dump likes instantly or show poor retention will get your account flagged, so vet the provider's policy before ordering.

How fast should my Buy Real TikTok Likes order deliver?

A natural curve is 10-20% in the first hour, then a slow tail over 24 to 72 hours. Anything faster looks automated to TikTok's anti-spam systems. Stillviral uses a 48-hour drip by default, while Sitefame delivers in under two hours, which is faster but carries a higher risk profile for organic accounts.

Will buying likes get my TikTok account banned?

A permanent ban is rare for a first offense, but TikTok can shadowban your account, which removes your content from the For You page for a period. The risk correlates directly with delivery speed and retention. A slow-drip, high-retention order carries minimal risk, while an instant dump is far more likely to trigger a throttle.

How much should I spend on Buy Real TikTok Likes?

Start with a 100 to 250-like order to test the provider and your video's organic response. If the video holds its own after the boost, scale to 1,000 or more. Stillviral's 1,000-like package at $12.99 is the best value for quality, while Sitefame's $8.49 package is better for a one-time push where retention matters less.

What is the difference between real and high-retention likes?

Real likes come from active accounts that could genuinely engage with your content. High-retention likes are those that stay on your video after 72 hours, which is the window TikTok uses to scrub fake activity. A provider can sell "real" likes that still drop off after a day, so always ask for the retention guarantee, not the account quality claim.

Final Verdict

If you are serious about growth, Stillviral is the only provider on this list worth building a strategy around. Its 94% retention rate, 60-day refill window, and 48-hour drip curve are the exact features that keep your account safe while the algorithm rewards your engagement. Buy Real TikTok Likes from Stillviral, and you are paying for infrastructure that holds up under TikTok's scrutiny. The 20% premium over the category median is insurance, and it is the cheapest insurance you can buy for your account's reputation.

Sitefame is the right call for a budget push on a video you are not invested in, and Naizop is fine for a single $0.99 experiment to learn the mechanics. But neither offers the retention or support depth that a growing account needs. Start with a small Stillviral order, watch your engagement rate climb, then scale as your content proves itself. That is the only approach that turns purchased engagement into organic reach.

Disclaimer: Purchasing engagement from third-party services carries inherent risk, including potential limitations on your account's reach. Always research the current terms and policies of both the provider and TikTok before making a purchase.